2009 Annual Report

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT BOB WORDEN, CCE YATES 2009 BOARD OF DIRECTORS, PRESIDENT

I have sometimes told people that Cornell Cooperative Extension is truly an appropriately named organization:

"Cornell" – the source for research-based knowledge that continues to increase and make a local impact. "Cooperative" – A mindset and style to create long-term relationships built on teamwork and collegiality. "Extension" – Availability of locally-based, knowledgeable educators to apply and customize solutions to local situations.

This model has worked for Yates County for decades. It is CCE's focus on solutions that appeals to me and brings success. In each of the last five years of my CCE Yates board membership, I continue to be impressed by the number of ways CCE touches and improves the lives of Yates County residents and, in the process, strengthens the local economy. Here are some notable examples from 2009.

- Facilitation of Farmland Protection grants that have resulted in the protection of 1100 acres in the past three years. These grants have amounted to $2 million this year alone which, of course, positively affect the local economy.
- Support for the Yates County Legislature committee on Marcellus Shale Natural Gas Drilling. CCE's role was to assure availability of scientific and research data to assure a rational decision-making process on this potential opportunity.

Continued support for the Dairy, Viticulture and Vegetable program helping to assure that farmers get and use research information to support successful crops. Many thousands of dollars of crop value were saved this year due to the rapid response from CCE vegetable specialists and Master Gardeners by providing timely management practices to prevent Late Blight.

Last year I mentioned that we all seem to have different historical touch-points to understanding CCE since the organization covers a very broad range of issues from agricultural support to youth development. My initial touchpoint comes from CCE's continuing efforts to improve Keuka Lake water quality. But, I soon developed a strong appreciation for CCE's other program areas. You can learn more about the many ways CCE touches our lives by reading the program summaries in this 2009 Annual Report.

From a personal standpoint, I came away this year with a greater understanding of the importance of the work of the longstanding 4-H program, having had the opportunity to judge some local and regional 4-H presentation events. Since I did not grow up as a 4-H member, I came away completely impressed by the capability of our 4-H youth to plan, carry out, and complete projects, and then present them enthusiastically and professionally. They understand that these projects take weeks of commitment and work and that the rewards are both internal and external in terms of self confidence and capability. In many ways, life is about completing projects, large or small. CCE and the volunteer 4-H leadership team are building these lifelong skills.

The Yates CCE staff has enjoyed a reputation for providing unbiased and reliable support for local governments, businesses and agencies. This credibility has been earned through years of responsiveness and plain hard work.

Last year I asked you to help spread the word on the many valuable contributions CCE makes to life in Yates County. Truly you responded. Input from Yates County citizens detailing the ways CCE programs impacted their lives was invaluable in assuring continued local financially support.

I close by thanking you for your support in the past, present and, the future.

YATES COUNTY FARMLAND PROTECTION

- To date, the Cornell Cooperative Extension of Yates County has obtained $3.8 million in grants from the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets to protect farmland in Yates County.
  - This grant funding has been used to protect 1,130 acres of prime farmland.
- For the past two years, CCE of Yates, Ontario and Seneca County have hosted the "Protecting Agriculture in the Finger Lakes" conference for over 230 farmers, municipal officials and Agriculture and Farmland Protection Board members to learn about tools and options for agriculture protection.
- For More Information Please Visit the Yates County Agriculture and Farmland Protection Board Website: http://counties.cce.cornell.edu/yates/afpb.html

Agriculture Literacy Week

Agriculture Literacy Week is an annual event that is part of the New York State Agriculture in the Classroom curriculum. It's goal is to create a better understanding of local agriculture in early elementary aged students, specifically second graders.

In 2009, the apple industry was highlighted with the book, The Empire State Investigator: The Applesauce Bandit, written by Juleah Tolosky and Heather Davis. This book was read to 185 elementary students in Yates County.

In 2010, the Timber Industry will be highlighted with the book, The Tree Farmer, written by Chuck Leavell and Nicholas Cravotta. For more information about this book, you can visit www.thetreefarmer.org.

NORTH WEST NEW YORK DAIRY, LIVESTOCK AND FIELD CROPS PROGRAM

The NWNY Dairy, Livestock and Field Crops Team is dedicated to providing lifelong education to the agricultural community to assist them in achieving their goals. The Team seeks to build producer capabilities to enhance profitability, practice environmental stewardship, better employee and family well-being, provide safe and healthful agricultural products and promote strong relationships in their communities.

Our audience ranges from some of the state's largest dairy and crop producers to hobby farmers with just a few production animals and acres of land. A wide range of field crop production practice including corn, soybeans, wheat and hay is addressed by the team . Integrated crop and pest management programs are exemplified by small Tactical Agricultural or TAg Teams to the popular annual Corn and Soybean Congresses. Education in dairy and livestock management ranges from one day seminars to multiple session, hands on training. Team facilitated discussion groups bring producers together to share ideas and experiences. Dairy producers have the option of employee training and facilitation in Spanish.

Team field research projects have included soil fertility, animal growth efficiency, crop variety evaluation, crop cultural practices, value added marketing, manure odor control and on-farm composting. Financial analysis and benchmarking is available through the Dairy Farm Business Summary program. Small farm initiatives have been implemented in collaboration with area Soil & Water District and the National Resources Conservation Service.

In keeping with a long valued extension tradition, individual farm needs are still addressed on a one-on-one basis.

FARM BUSINESS SUMMARY AND ANALYSIS

The NWNY Dairy, Livestock, and Field Crops Program cooperates with farm business owners to complete farm business summary and analysis work. Work begins in January and continues through late April. Cornell University Cooperative Extension's Dairy Farm Business Summary Program is used with dairy farms, and the Financial Statements for the Agriculture Program is used to work with other producers. Contact John Hanchar, email: jjh6@cornell.edu, phone: 585-658-3250 extension 112, to participate.

In Yates County, there are two Farmers' Markets to visit in addition to road side stands and the Windmill. The Yates County Cooperative Farm and Craft Market is held on Saturday mornings on Main Street in Penn Yan. For information contact Annetta Martin at 315-536-2473.

The new 2009 Dundee Farmers' Market was held on Wednesday afternoons, behind the Methodist Church on Water Street. Plans for the 2010 season are underway — call Janie Levatino for information, 607-678-4087, or email her at jhlev@yahoo.com.

CSA

The first Penn Yan Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) began this year. Participating farmers grew enough food to supply over 40 families with vegetables throughout the growing season. If you would like information about the 2010 CSA, contact Jan Hafner at 315-536-7632 or email her at JLHAFNER@gmail.com

FINGER LAKES GRAPE PROGRAM HELPS GROWERS DURING CHALLENGING 2009 SEASON

Every farmer knows that some years will be more challenging than others – it just goes with the territory. Grape growers in the Finger Lakes certainly had their share of challenges in 2009, including a cool and somewhat wet growing season, and a reduction in the demand for grapes this year by many buyers, which led to price reductions for most varieties.

The Finger Lakes Grape Program (FLGP) responded to these challenges in several ways. The FLGP provided the industry with timely, research-based information on disease control, vine nutrition and crop management in order to help growers produce a quality crop even in a less-than-perfect growing season. The FLGP distributes this information to over 300 growers and wineries in the Finger Lakes and elsewhere, including 91 in Yates County, through a number of means, including its weekly Vineyard Update e-mails, the Vineyard Notes newsletter, field meetings, the annual Finger Lakes Grape Growers' Conference, and grower visits.

In the face of a significant surplus of grapes in the state this year, the FLGP developed a new website to help growers and wineries find new markets for their products. The New York Grape & Wine Classifieds was launched in April 2009, and allows growers and wineries to advertise grapes and bulk juice or wine that they have available or that they are looking to purchase. The service also accepts ads for vineyard and winery equipment, small numbers of vines that may be needed during planting or left over from planting, and industry employment opportunities. There is no charge to list ads on the website, and it is open to industry members across New York. The service has been used extensively by growers and wineries in its first year of operation, with over 450 ads placed on the site over its first 6 months of operation. Feedback from growers and winemakers has been very positive, with a number of them reporting that they have been able to sell their products to new buyers both in New York and outside of the state. The FLGP was able to secure funding from the New York Wine & Grape Foundation to support the ongoing development and maintenance of the website. We are also working with the Wine & Grape Foundation on ways to better promote the website to other regions of the country in hopes of continuing to expand the market for New York grapes.

CORNELL VEGETABLE PROGRAM

This spring CVP specialist Judson Reid worked with a cooperating farmer to maximize the economic return of their high tunnels. With high light and the vertical infrastructure of high tunnels in spring, could we squeeze in another crop besides tomatoes? In mid-February petunias were seeded, at the same time as the high tunnel tomatoes. Tomatoes were transplanted in mid-April, and the petunias were potted-up into 12-inch hanging baskets, then spaced at a low density above the tomato crop. By June the flower baskets were sold and the tomatoes were starting to ripen fruit. To avoid pests moving from the flowers to the tomatoes, CVP technician Kathryn Klotzbach scouted weekly. This represented the integration of two grants. New York Farm Viability is funding our research of new high tunnel crops, and Northeast SARE is funding natural pest control in tunnels. While we are still processing data, it looks like we can add $1500-2000 dollars revenue per 120 ft tunnel and yet avoid chemical pesticides.

WINTER AND HOLIDAY SAVINGS

Energy

Seal the Hatches!

Use weather stripping and caulking to be sure all air leaks around doors, windows and other access openings! Your insulation will be more effective without air leaks!

Use CFL's

For your household lighting, you can save about $70.00 over the life of the bulb (10,000 hours) by switching from incandescent bulbs to compact fluorescent lights (CFL).

LED Holiday Lighting

Light Emitting Diodes (LED's) are the way to go for holiday lighting! They use very little electricity, last a very long time, and come in a variety of styles and designs!

Attend a FREE "Save Energy – Save Dollars" Workshop!

Go to our website! Check out 'Upcoming Classes' http://counties.cce.cornell.edu/Yates/

Financial

Make a list and check it twice, and STICK TO IT!

Plan ahead! How much will you need for holiday spending? How much can you set aside each paycheck so you can do your shopping STRESS FREE!!

Do not spend money that you do not have.

SHOP EARLY! Avoid crowds and impulse buying! Go with a plan (and a list!)

REMEMBER THE SPIRIT OF THE SEASON!

Gifts from the heart are priceless! Homemade is always best!

Help children share in the spirit of the season by encouraging community service and involvement.

Plan to attend a FREE financial management workshop! Check our website!

CCE EVENTS AND TIPS FOR NOVEMBER

- Gardeners: Tie, support and protect any shrubs or trees that may get damaged from winter snow and ice.
- The best way to thaw a frozen turkey is in the refrigerator. Figure 24 hours for every 4-5 pounds, so a 15 pound bird will take about three days to thaw. Thaw your turkey in its original packaging and place it on a tray to catch any juices.
- Leave your turkey, stuffing and other holiday dinner foods at room temperature for no longer than 2 hours.
- Use leftover turkey with in 3-4 days or freeze.

KEUKA LAKE LAND USE LEADERSHIP TRAINING

CCE collaborated with the Keuka Lake Association, Keuka Watershed Improvement Cooperative, Pace University, Cornell University CARDI, and Genesee Finger Lakes Regional Planning Council (GFLRPC) and applied for and was awarded a NYS Quality Communities grant. A steering committee was formed to identify local leaders for the program and to help with curriculum development. Two, 4-day training sessions with 35 participants each were held at Keuka College. The training was tailored to address issues unique to the Keuka Lake watershed (i.e., steep slopes, ag land preservation, etc.). Both content and process skills were presented and learned in the workshops. A land use plan development committee was formed with participants from the training sessions to work with GFLRPC and CCE to develop a watershed land use plan.

As a result, seventy municipal leaders participated in the land use training and 15 participated in the land use plan development committee. Thirty copies of the Keuka Watershed Land Use Planning Guide were delivered to each municipality along with a cooperation agreement that all municipalities signed. Testimonials from LULA training include:

- "This class was highly valuable both for the skills participants garnered as well as the connections made both within a community and between communities."
- "If you are involved in any stage of local government, this is very valuable training."
- "This is an excellent training to help you realize that collaborative decision making helps makes the best, informed decision taking or attempting to take the interest of all affected parties (not just primary stakeholders) into consideration."
- "What a wonderful opportunity to gather together as watershed towns plan for the future and share problems and solutions."
- "Makes one more able to participate in a Town Committee on land use."

Additional direct results accomplished from this program include the creation of a network of people interested, motivated and knowledgeable on issues affecting Keuka and a plan to guide future actions related to land use.
